On Saturday, October 27th at 7:30 PM, come experience this one-man show by Yannis Simonides, a Emmy award winning actor, in a delightful and humorous dramatization of the trial of Socrates in ancient Greece, at which he defends himself ("apology" means defense) against accusations of not believing in the gods of the state and of corrupting Athenian youth. This is a profoundly meaningful insight into the civilization that brought us, among other things, democracy. Persons interested in philosophy, politics, ethics, various faith traditions, law, and sociology are sure to enjoy this unique performance. This event is FREE. The Congregational Church of Patchogue is located at 95 East Main Street. For more information, contact Rev. Dwight Lee Wolter at (631) 475-1235
